ABSTRACT

Suggestions for improving school library and media services are offered by elementary school media staff in the Sacramento (California) area. This manual consists of one-page reference sheets for each school that responded to a request to share helpful ideas on media services. In addition to a helpful idea or ideas, each sheet includes the name of the school and district and information on whom to contact. The reference sheets are organized into seven sections: (1) overall planning; (2) remodeling/room arrangement; (3) storage and handling of materials; (4) scheduling/use planning; (5) programs with students; (6) promotion of services; and (7) just come visit. Almost half of the ideas fall into the student programs category. An alphabetical list of the schools involved is included. (DC)

"Thankyous" are extended to the members of the EMC Clerical staff who typed and did graphics "under pressure" of time. These good persons are Ruth King, Melissa Chiles, and Carol Spark.

Special appreciation also to James Hill and his staff in the printing department who put in extra hours and gave up a weekend to meet the deadline for distribution.

INTRODUCTION

This year's Visits/Ideas Manual should be considered "a beginning". We are aware that there is not a page for every school in the two-county area. All were invited via district personnel. These are the schools which chose to participate in the initial exchange.

It is hoped that at least three results will be accomplished from the publishing of these sheets. 1.) Participating school personnel will benefit from sharing and exchanging ideas. 2.) Other persons reading the Manual will be stimulated to put some of the ideas into practice in the schools with which they are associated. 3.) Interest will be generated in further study of the elements of a good program of media library services at the building level for elementary school students.

The Manual is made available without binding so that the sheets may be inserted in a three-ring notebook. In this way, sheets may be added, changes made.

Perhaps by the next Media Library Awareness Day in 1977, other elementary schools will choose to make a sheet available to be included. Hopefully also, both the exchange of ideas and the interest will be reflected in expansion of better Media Library Services at all elementary schools in the Sacramento/Yolo area.

Our library served as a classroom for many years. In the back was a large double-sided bookcase forming a coat closet in the back. We needed the floor space and shelf space. I asked a parent to saw the shelf in half, tear down the coat hooks and anchor the shelves to the back wall giving us added shelves at no cost plus floor space. The floor had no tile (where the bookcase had been standing) but was covered with an extra piece of carpeting.

IDEAS WE WANT TO SHARE:

The teachers and parents have given top priority to the support of the Media Library for the past several years. A very enthusiastic and active force of volunteer parents give many hours of service each week. The collection has been built, mainly using money from the school's lump sum budget, but support from the PTA funds have been helpful in purchasing equipment and art prints.

The space has been increased from the original library room to include a classroom with additional bookcases and carpet added. Various types of equipment on district-constructed carrels, the length of one wall, enable students to utilize non-book media for individual study. Earphones plugged into the television set or 16mm projector gives access to various educational programs and films for small group viewing. The use of a bright yellow and orange color scheme in the Media Library at the North Davis School helps to convey the feeling of warmth and friendliness.

We have color-coded all spines of books in our library. We have used a very inexpensive method of acrylic water-based paint, identifying letters and numbers in white on all books, and a protective covering of mod poge. This has cost approximately $7.00 for all books in the library. We have found that this saves us many hours in reading shelves as we can quickly identify books out of place. We also find that it has helped the students learn to find their own books more readily. It also facilitates the in-service training of new adult and student volunteers, which we have each year. This project was accomplished with volunteer personnel, both adult and student. Approval of this project was obtained from county and district personnel prior to beginning of the project.

IDEAS WE WANT TO SHARE:

We have had problems of filmstrips being scratched. After careful investigation we found the scratching was caused by filmstrips falling to the floor where small particles clung to the filmstrip causing it to be scratched when run through the projector. This problem was quickly solved by using rug samples under the equipment. The filmstrip catches on the rug instead of sliding to the floor. The rugs are brightly colored and add eye appeal to the room as well as serving such a useful purpose.

Another idea is marking a cassette with the words "play me" to indicate to the students which is the correct side to be played in the recorder. One side is audible and the other side is inaudible, both terms far too difficult for our younger students to read and understand. Thus, the easy label "play me" became a part of our current system of marking cassettes, and it has certainly cut down on the frustrations and time of our students.

We have had the pleasure of having a number of schools visit us and share our history of development and ideas with them. We are always happy to have visitors and would like to extend an invitation to anyone interested in our library/media center. Give us a call and come see us. Our media staff is planning to visit a number of schools this semester to see first-hand the method of operation in their libraries and media centers. The exchange of ideas is needed if we are all to grow and become the vital force necessary to todays student.

We used color coding when we remodeled last summer to help students learn to shelve books more easily. We chose carpeting with reds and orange predominate then used primary colors (red, yellow, green, blue and plum and orange) to paint our shelves.

We then sectioned the Media Center into Easy reading, Reference, Fiction, Non-fiction, Biography and A-V areas, using the different color bookcases as dividers.

Each book belonging in a section then had it's spine painted on the bottom two inches the same color as the shelf. Legible call numbers were then uniformly printed on each book.

Now, not only are we extremely colorful, it is much easier for students and adults to learn where different books belong. It is easy to see that the yellow book on the red shelf must be in the wrong place.

Skycrest is in the process of co-ordinating its Aims program with the library. The purpose of this is to bring all materials to a central location, so that a teacher may either check out what materials she needs, or she can request materials. Our plan is to catalog games and filmstrips to the level in which the teacher is working, so that she can look in the file, see what is available for a particular series and either check it out or request the material.

Scheduling / Use Planning

Treehorn looked at the form:

CHECK REASON YOU HAVE TO SEE LIBRARIAN
(THAT WILL SAVE TIME)

1. talking in the library
2. bringing pet snake to visit
3. distributing popcorn

There were several things to check, but Treehorn couldn't find one that said "Being Too Small to Reach the Water Bubbler". He finally wrote "SHRINKING".

When the lady said he could see the Librarian, Treehorn went into her office with his form.

The Librarian looked at the form, and she looked at Treehorn. Then she looked at the form again.

"I can't read this," said the Librarian. "It looks like SHIRKING. You're not SHIRKING, are you, Treehorn? We can't have any shirkers here, you know. We're a team, and we all have to do our very best."

"It says SHRINKING," said Treehorn. "I'm Shrinking."

"Shrinking, eh?" said the Librarian. "Well, now, I'm very sorry to hear that, Treehorn. You were right to come to me. That's what I'm here for. To guide. Not to punish, but to guide. To guide all the members of my team. To solve all their problems."

... and-a-one, and-a-two and-a-read .. READ .. READ AROUND THE CLOCK!! During Children's Book Week (November) we had students sign up to read for a half-hour period in the library. We drew a large clock on the Bulletin Board and divided it up (like pie) to cover the period of 8:30 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. each day. (The Principal and two teachers also signed up to read!) At the appointed time the "reader" came to the library with her book and signed up in a makeshift booth at the back of the library. In this booth was a timer, record player and earphones to allow for quiet reading. At the end of the time the "reader" wrote down the number of pages read. (By the end of the week we tabulated the number of pages and the children were amazed to see that collectively they had read the equivalent of half of the unabridged dictionary!) Each "reader" was awarded a little badge which she wore proudly the rest of the week. BADGE - A white circle mounted on a red, white & blue striped ribbon. The name of the reader was in the place of a mouth.

We made a READERS' THEATRE out of some storage bookshelves in a dark corner of the library. Take out one shelf so you have an open area of about 24" high. With stiff red paper and black felt pen make theatre "curtains" to frame this space. Set up a filmstrip projector, a box of old-type filmstrips with writing on them, and some chairs; then invite in a small group of students to have their own "private showing"! Excellent reading practice for the reluctant reader.

In January ask your telephone company for some old directories. Use them when teaching to reinforce library and reference skills. The same rules apply to the Directory as to the card catalog - inverted names, spelling out numbers, word-by-word alphabetization etc.

Students at Cambridge Heights participate in activities which we hope will facilitate their developing Media Library skills in developmental sequence planned from kindergarten through sixth grade.

For example:

1.) By the time the student leaves Pod B (1st and 2nd grade), he will know how to use the card catalog in limited ways.

2.) While in Pod C (3rd and 4th grade), students receive instruction in the use and care of the equipment and in library skills for a period of 30 minutes once a week during their reading class. Skills include the Dewey Decimal System, further use of the card cataleg, biographies and research.

3.) While in Pod D (4th and 5th grade), they receive instruction in the use and care of the equipment and reinforcement of skills already introduced for a period of 30 minutes once a week during their reading class time. They also are introduced to authors, illustrators and their books. By the end of the year they will be introduced to the Reader's Guide to Periodicals as they are available in the Intermediate Schools in our district. Students are free to use the Media Center from 8:30 to 3:30 in their free time. Some students are chosen to be student librarians and help before their school time or after school for a semester.

How many libraries have a rabbit, guinea pig or rat to check out?

Our mini-zoo can be checked out by anyone, one at a time or all together. Children check the animals out for a week at home and in classrooms for three days.

Our animals are well-trained. They love to be held and cuddled. At lunch-time, children are welcome to hold and pet the animals. If the animals don't get held, they climb up and around their cages until they get some attention.

Students are learning to assume responsibility for maintaining the animals - cleaning the cages, feeding and watering.

The idea has worked out so well, next year we will be getting other animals, such as a snake, a lizard and bugs.

Books pertaining to animals and insects are displayed around the room. They are becoming worn through frequent use by our students.

STORY HOUR:

Mondays and Tuesdays at Harry Dewey Media Center are scheduled exclusively as "Story Hour" days for all K through 2nd grades. This involves a total of nine classes including a transitional primary.

Three parent volunteers and the librarian, who read on these days, select books, poetry, periodicals, etc. to be read during the 20 to 25 minute periods. The parent volunteers go to the classrooms to bring the children to the media center. The "teacher pet" or special child for the day carries the Happy Face flag and leads the group from the classroom to the story corner, a carpeted area in the library. The flag signifies a special group going to and from the library and helps to keep the line in order.

Teacher aides under the direction of Lynn Pistochini, made ten hand puppets to be used in conjunction with story hour. The versatile characters can be used with inumerable different books and stories. The colorful felt puppets are an Indian, a mouse, a frog, a bear, a lion, a cat clown, a dog, a girl, and a monster.

In conjunction with a program instructing children to handle and care for books, book marks are given to all children. (Kindergarten and first graders enjoy making their own).

Encouraging children to read more is the idea behind the Book-Worm Club. Children become members by reading books commensurate with their grade and ability then reporting orally to librarian on them. (An informal rule of thumb we use is over 20 pages long for second graders, over 30 pages for third graders, over 40 pages for fourth graders, etc.). Progress is notated by bright stars on a happy worm and the title of the book on the back of the worm in the librarian's writing.

A big party is given at the end of the year for those who have at least a ten-star bookworm. There are games with prizes (such as a spider hunt using plastic spiders from the Wishing Well) and goodies to eat and drink. Special recognition is given for children who have accomplished the most reports.

To interest the students in reading, we try to provide a visual experience with our bulletin boards and display table. Approximately twice a month, we spotlight a subject of interest to the students and display all the materials we have in the library concerning that subject. When we did "Life in the Sea," the bulletin boards were covered with posters of fish, on the display tables were shells and books to help in identifying them, and the listening area had tapes and filmstrips on life in the sea.

Come see some of the exciting results from our big Book Extravaganza Contest. It had seven suggested kinds of activities as follows:

I. Design Thematic Book Boxes

II. Give Birth to a Bibliography

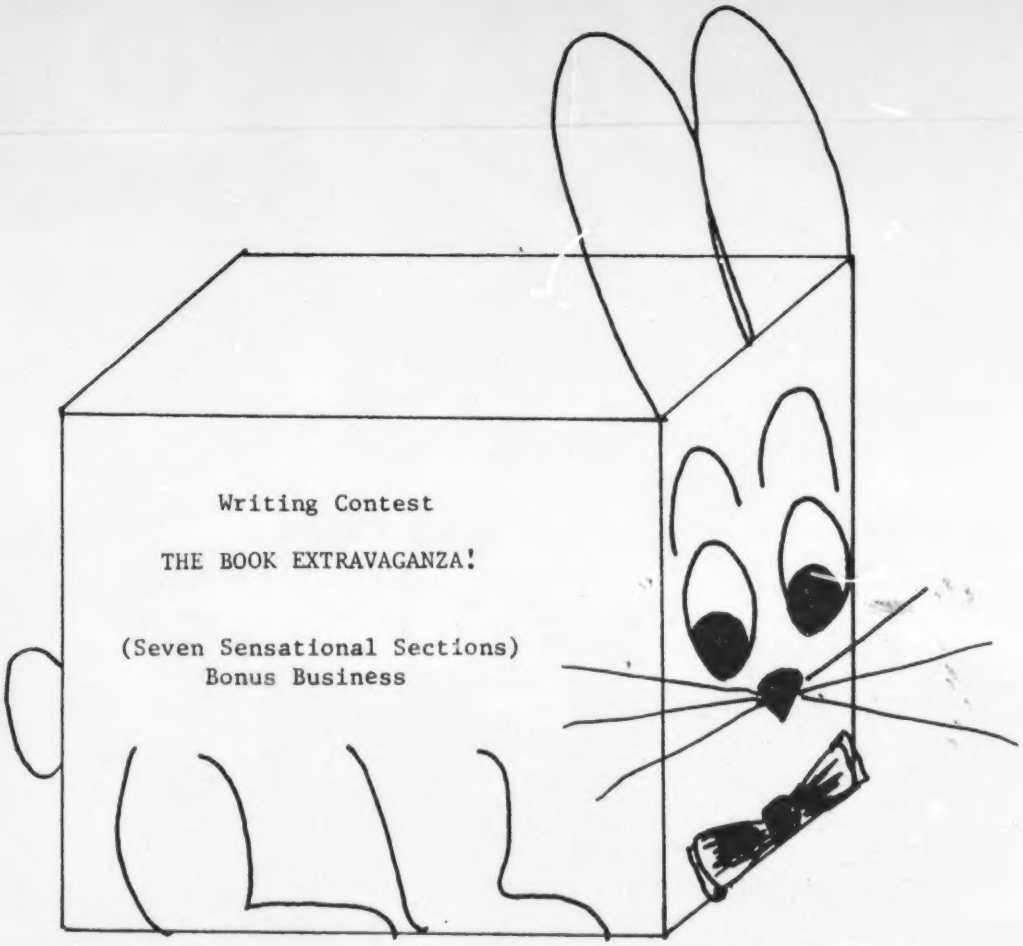
III. Accentuate Activities

IV. Create Boasting Bookmarks

V. Fashion a Folder

VI. Design and Make a Puppet with a Purpose

VII. Be a Whiz and Write a Quiz



These were suggestions in relation to designing book boxes:

Design Thematic Book Boxes (25 points)

(Intrigue other readers with your exciting bookbox upon one (1) of the following ideas:)

A. A theme

Example: Bears
Magic is a Must
Dragons are Delightful
Calling All Athletes
A Code Caper

B. An Author in Action

(Select one (1) author who is your favorite and who has written many books. Display your author in such a way that others will be inspired to seek out pencil pusher.)

Example: Beverly Cleary's Corner
The Du Bois Den
Weber at Work

* The design of your box should indicate the theme. Size and shape will be important. How imaginative are you?

Category VII related to Quiz writing:

Be a Whiz and Write a Quiz (20 points)

Select one of the books in your collection for which you will write a reading quiz. Your quiz should have a minimum of ten (10) thoughtful questions.

* BONUS BONANZA **********

This area has five fabulous features. You may choose any of these areas to add to your project. All items have a point value of 20. You may do as many of the items as you wish but the maximum number of points alloted will be 100. YOU may NOT substitute any of these for the above listed projects. Each Bookbox must have the seven sensational sections as basic items but they may have as many bonus areas as you wish to add. Remember: Your Bookbox could be worth a terrific two hundred points!

Self Evaluation was important.

Measure Your Own Merit

Calculate your success on the Book Bonanza by checking on the Worth of your project. The point scale of value listed will help you with your evaluation.

Point Value:

The following will help you evaluate your project. This is an example of an area which has a twenty-five (25) point value:

POINTS	COMMENTS
0-5	Did task (No special effort displayed)
5-10	Effort made to make the project neat and orderly
10-15	Colorful, labeled clearly
15-20	Illustrated with interesting materials Special care in planning, easily identified
20-25	Coordinated theme beautifully Artistically attractive and motivates others to explore your book theme

Create a Dial-a-Book. Subject headings are listed on a circular piece of paper. Impose a smaller circle over this with a pie-shaped wedge cut out. Underneath the subject headings list the books by author and title that are available for checkout. Students dial their favorite subjects and find books which are available.

Cassette-slide show. (made by the librarian) To help teach reference skills. It is entitled "The Brontosaurus in the Library."

Cassettes recorded by Fifth and Sixth grade students for primary grades.

Students' file of books read this year. Each file will be signed by the librarian at the end of the year, and will be available to show their new teachers next fall all they have read during 1975-76!

We set up an area in the Intermediate Media Center that is strictly the Kids Korner. We have encouraged students to use the bulletin board for special art work, such as macrame', needlepoint, scring art or drawings. A special section is called Want Ads which lets other students know if anyone has a bike for sale or needs a friend with which to take skating lessons. The community resource file is also kept in the Kids Korner. Students that are members of the Media Club have free access to the file when they are interested in setting up field trips and guest speakers. The students make all the arrangements from calling for information to getting transportation for others. A card is kept on all field trips and speakers to be used again. The School Scrap Book has a permanent spot on the book case. The students take pictures of special occasions and keep a yearly record of events at school. The main idea of the Kids Korner is involvement by the students in areas of interest to them rather than only us, the adults.

The library/media center at North Avenue Elementary School contains a varied collection of children's periodicals that are used for research as well as for pleasure reading. In addition to learning to use encyclopedias, dictionaries, atlases, almanacs and gazetteers, etc., students are also given instruction in the use of the Subject Index to Children's Magazines. This is a children's periodical index to articles in the magazines to which we subscribe. Instruction in the use of this index is given by the media specialist to small groups of fifth and sixth grade students.

At North Avenue, we feel that teaching elementary children to use this periodical index lays an excellent foundation for future use of the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature, and initiates another reference activity that will hopefully become habit.

IDEAS WE WANT TO SHARE:

Every month we have a theme bulletin board with promotion of related books and media, but for the past 2 years, in April, we have enlarged the theme into a festival and tried to actively involve as many children as possible. Two years ago, we had a Winnie-the-Pooh Festival and kids brought in drawings, sculptures, stuffed animals, poems, songs and jigsaw puzzles which they had created around the Milne characters. Last year we did "Favorite Places in San Francisco" in the same way.

We have several objectives in these festivals: 1.) stimulation of reading and literature appreciation; 2.) creation of a focus of enthusiasm for all the children in the school; and 3.) since our open house for parents is in April, many more parents visit the library on that night than would otherwise.

This year we are going to attempt a Pet Festival, with small live pets in clean (?) cages brought in during Open House Week, in addition to the creative contributions. We make no predictions as to the outcome of this year's festival -- we may wind up with snakes behind the fiction books and hamsters under everybody's feet.

By the way, these festivals are not contests and we don't award any prizes. However, we have in the past given a piece of candy to each participant, and probably will do so again this year.

We are in new quarters this year -- a classroom, with a small adjoining conference room which has been christened The Silent Room. For some time the teachers at Pioneer have felt the need for a place where children could work alone, free from the distractions of the classroom or the main part of the library; also a place where upset individuals could "cool off" in solitude, but a less stigmatizing location than the office.

So, we have The Silent Room, which has six semi-isolated study desks, and where nobody talks (supposedly). Teachers can send children to it any time and children using the library can choose to work or read there (and frequently do, even at recess). The room also contains some storage cupboards, the vertical file, and the 900's shelving, which act as dividers between the study desks.

The activities of our library are closely related to the activities of our Activity Center and Enrichment Classes.

Enrichment classes meeting in the library include marine biology, Navajo weaving, stitchery (a large stitchery mural done by the children is on display), art, finger weaving, and small loom weaving.

The school's two week celebration of the Chinese New Year stimulated circulation of book and non-book materials including art prints (Jan-Feb).

The library is open daily for free flow circulation. In addition 17 classes are scheduled for a regular weekly library period. This includes a regular story time for 13 classes. Instructions for using the card catalog are often given as part of the story time.

The library is staffed by an 80% librarian and 23 parent volunteers.

Visitors are welcome anytime. Enrichment classes meet every Monday and Wednesday from 12:45 to 1:30.

To help teachers become aware of materials available in the Media Center we sent to each teacher a check sheet on which to indicate units of work to be studied in the coming months. When these sheets were returned to us a bibliography on each of some 15 or so subjects was prepared. These were duplicated and a copy of each was given to every teacher. The bibliographies were on such subjects as: Birds, Space Exploration, Weather, Civil War, The Bicentennial, "All About You," Holidays, California History and Geography, Indians, A Study of Biography, Dinosaurs, Oceanography, Mexico, Insects, Japan, etc. They included not only non-fiction and fiction books, but also film strips, records, cassettes, magazine articles, clippings in the vertical file, picture sets, patterns of crafts and things to make, models, maps and globes, pamphlets, large framed pictures available for hanging in the classroom, and games.
